

Bringing back good pasture from forest land is not an easy task. Fortunately, we have these wonderful Icelandic sheep who will eat just about anything. Our sheep do most of the work in restoring the pastures here. They are quite happy eating saplings and briar bushes! As we practice intensive rotational grazing, the sheep are spreading their manure as they graze. This saves us from having to spread much manure and the fertilizer is free! Our Icelandic sheep are improving soil quality every day. We have seen dramatic improvement in the fields over the last two summers.

get interdum urna. Suspendisse eget elit tellus, vel fermentum est.

eet ac, pulvinar in mi.